

Movies for winter holidays without fuss and endless chores

We wish you to spend holidays as relaxed as it can get. We've put together a collection of movies in case you've already seen the New Year classics and aren't ready to get out from under the blankets yet.

Arthur Christmas

animation, fantasy, 2011

We'll see behind the curtain as to how the modern Santa Claus manages so much in one night. Not like us.

The Christmas Chronicles

fantasy, comedy, 2018

Another modern-day Santa who doesn't say "ho-ho-ho," but saves Christmas with two kids who caught him off guard. Also, Santa is Kurt Russell, which is always a good thing.

animation, fantasy, 2019

An animated film about a spoiled boy, a grim town in the far north, the hostility of two clans, and the love of a forest hermit, which is enough for everyone.

Wish I Was Here

drama, comedy, 2014

The story of a father and husband who, at 35, is trying to find himself and become an actor. A simple movie, even a little corny, but very sweet.

drama, comedy, 2014

A movie with smells of spices and delicious food about a noisy Indian immigrant family who opens a cafe in Provence right across the street from a Michelin restaurant.

Song of the Sea

animation, fantasy, 2014

An incredible story of Ben and his little sister Sirsha's journey, of a vanishing world of magic, support, and love.
